Idlewyld Inn Opens Doors to Unique Fine Dining Experience

(London ON) – Long one of London’s favourite spots for overnight getaways and business travel, the Idlewyld Inn announced today that they are now the newest player on London’s fine dining scene. After months of construction, owners John and Christine Kropp opened their spectacular new restaurant to the public and promised an epicurean experience that will be far from ordinary.

“The restaurant really is a reflection of the quiet elegance that the Idlewyld is famous for,” said Innkeeper Christine Kropp. “The Victorian architecture, the ambiance, the intimate service and the cuisine all blend together to create an experience that’s sophisticated and romantic, but still very relaxed,” she said.

“Fine dining with a definite flair,” is how John Kropp described the Idlewyld’s menu. “We’ve pulled together an incredible culinary team and challenged them to create a menu that is imaginative and inspired. They come to us from some of the finest restaurants from across the continent, so each of them brings a specific regional influence that is reflected in the menu.” From the lighter fare of the California coast to the Cajun spice of Louisiana, from the wilds of British Columbia to the metropolitan sophistication of Toronto, the menu selection is elegant and eclectic.

“The one thing the Idlewyld will be known for is our cutting edge presentation,” said Christine Kropp. “Whether you go with one of our signature dishes like venison, elk or duck or you prefer the more traditional beef, poultry or fish, we give every single dish on the menu a special finesse that makes it exciting and impressive.”

The selection of fine wines at the Idlewyld is equally extraordinary. “We wanted our wines to go well beyond what’s typically available and be as much of an adventure as our menu.” said John Kropp.

Of course, the dining experience at the Idlewyld would not be complete without a selection of desserts that can only be described as pure decadence.

The restaurant at the Idlewyld Inn is open daily from 7:00 am to 10:00 pm to serve breakfast, lunch and dinner.
